Drew Memorial Hospital is launching the first ever Cancer Care Center Community challenge drive. We recently stumbled across a story about a lady named Amanda Rosen who came up with the concept of the port pillow. It was brought to her attention the many cancer patients were experiencing discomfort and pain from seatbelts. Many started improperly wearing their seat belt or stop wearing it all together. So she started sewing and came with the port pillow to make their traveling more comfortable and safer. Amanda's passion to help support her local cancer center has now spread worldwide.

Drew Memorial Hospital Cancer Care Center would like to extend Amanda's project to our community by providing the same comfort level to our cancer patients. We are challenging community members and organizations to get to sewing for a good cause by helping us give our patients that extra level of comfort in their time of need.
